Introduction

Marriage is a divine partnership designed not only for companionship but for advancing God's Kingdom. When a couple embraces the practices of saving wisely and giving cheerfully, they embody biblical stewardship that blesses their household and extends God's love to others. This balance between saving and giving requires discernment, trust, and unity — qualities that God cultivates deeply within marriage.

As a Kingdom couple, your resources are not just personal assets but tools entrusted by God to build His purposes on earth. Saving does not mean hoarding; it means wisely preparing for future needs and opportunities. Giving does not mean reckless spending; it means generously releasing what God has given, trusting Him to provide.

In this 7-day study, you will explore Scripture that encourages financial stewardship intertwined with marital unity, peace, and purpose. Through devotional reflections and practical insights, you will learn to cultivate a heart posture that values both saving and giving—unlocking blessings in your marriage and the broader Kingdom.

Let this journey be a spiritual awakening to God's design for your marriage finances—where careful saving fuels confident giving, and where joyful generosity glorifies God. Together, as husband and wife, you can become powerful witnesses of God's wisdom, love, and provision.

Marriage is more than a contract; it's a covenant relationship strengthened by shared values. As you begin this journey, consider how unity in financial stewardship reflects your spiritual unity. Ecclesiastes reminds us that two working together can accomplish more and withstand challenges.

Your marriage is a 'cord of three strands'—you, your spouse, and God. This bond equips you to steward resources wisely, not just for yourselves but for Kingdom purposes. Saving is prudent planning, but giving demonstrates trust in God's provision and a heart aligned with His generosity.
